

Charitable organizations can sometimes struggle to find ways to effectively reach and engage potential donors, relying on traditional methods that aren't effective. Some companies have experimented with online fundraising, but these efforts are often limited in scope and rely on short campaigns that frequently go abandoned. Without a reliable and adaptable strategy, charities miss out on connecting with certain audiences. How can charities better connect with a broader audience and establish a sustainable source of income for their causes?